SECTION D: STATEMENT OF LEGAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES

1. CDC has ordered that you be provisionally quarantined because we believe that you are infected with a quarantinable disease. This action is necessary because there is a risk that the disease may spread to other people. CDC has also ordered that you undergo a medical examination, which is necessary to ascertain your current health status.
2. Medical examinations conducted pursuant to this order will be performed by licensed health staff that will have primary responsibility for your clinical care. CDC will provide input and consultation to health staff on issues relating to the diagnosis, management, and methods for preventing the transmission of communicable disease.
3. CDC may order that you remain in provisional quarantine, but you may be released earlier if CDC determines that provisional quarantine is no longer warranted. If CDC determines that it is necessary to hold you beyond the provisional-quarantine period, then CDC will issue an additional quarantine order.
4. In the event that CDC issues a quarantine order, the time that you remain in quarantine may not exceed, as determined by the CDC Director, the period of incubation and communicability (the maximum length of time that the disease may be spread to other persons) for the disease.
5. In the event that a quarantine order is issued, you may request that CDC conduct an administrative hearing to review the order. If you wish, you may also authorize a representative, such as a family member or physician, to represent you at the hearing. The hearing may be conducted over the telephone, in writing, or through some other method designed to provide you (or your representative) with an opportunity to participate.
6. CDC will monitor your health condition so that the time that you remain in provisional quarantine will not last longer than necessary to prevent the spread of the disease.
7. During the time that you are in provisional quarantine you should cooperate with the instructions of health staff and other authorized personnel.
8. Violations of this order may subject you to a fine of no more than $250,000 or one year in jail, or both, or as otherwise provided by law.
